

PRESIDENT SUBMITS PHILIPPINE TARIFF

In Special Message He Urges Revenue Laws.

PROTECTION FOR THE ISLANDS

Proposed Bill, the Text of Which Accompanied Communication to Congress, Likely to Be Passed—Bailey
Submits Income Tax Amendment to the Senate Bill.

Revenue laws that will raise money to help defray the expenses of the Philippine government and also offer protection to the island industries, are urged in a special message transmitted to Congress yesterday by the President.

The message carried the text of a proposed act for the Philippine tariff, and almost immediately the measure was introduced in the two branches of Congress. In the House, the bill was introduced by Mr. Payne, chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, and in the Senate it was presented by Mr. Stone.

Recommendations of the Secretary of War for a revision of the Philippine tariff were contained in the message of the President. These advocate a plan for raising as much revenue as possible from imports to the islands and at the same time provide for protecting the island industries.

To Assure American Market.

It is proposed that the bill interfere as little as possible with free trade between the United States and the Philippines. Generally speaking, it makes but few changes in the schedule now provided in the Philippine tariff. Its framers say its tendency is to insure as far as practicable the benefit of the Philippine market for American manufactures and products.

The measure makes several additions to the free list. There also will be an increase in revenue duties, by which it is expected to make up the loss the islands will sustain by the operations of the free trade provisions in the pending tariff bill.

Introduction of the Philippine tariff bill is regarded as a natural consequence of the work of the Philippine tariff commission, which has been studying conditions in the islands.

Representatives, as well as Senators, look favorably upon the measure and believe that it will be passed at this session of Congress, as suggested by the President. It is thought that the House will take up the measure while the Senate is considering the tariff bill, and that it will be passed by the upper branch of Congress when the tariff bill goes to the conference.

Bailey Proposes Income Tax.

The first shot of the Democrats was fired at the tariff bill in the Senate yesterday when Senator Bailey, the ranking Democrat on the Finance Committee, introduced an amendment providing for an income tax of 3 per cent on all incomes of $5,000 or more.

This measure has been under consideration for some time, and has the solid backing of the minority party in the Senate. It is believed that enough Republican members will approve it to insure its passage.

Senator Bailey said, after introducing his measure, that if passed it would add $100,000,000 annually to the national treasury. The old law that was declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court provided for a tax of 2 per cent on all incomes of $4,000 or more. Only some features of this measure were adjudged invalid, and Senator Bailey believes his measure has avoided these. The Texas Senator also said he was prepared to challenge a decision of the court if necessary. The old bill was declared unconstitutional in that it provided taxes for State, county, and municipal securities, and the salaries of State and government officials. These features were left out of the Bailey amendment.

Wants a Tariff Commission.

Senator Beveridge introduced an amendment providing for a tariff commission. It is similar in many respects to the bill he presented at the last Congress, and provides for a commission of seven members. The Senator spoke briefly on his amendment, and said he would make a more detailed statement later. He expressed the hope that the Finance Committee would see the provision in the right light, and that it would be passed.

The Senate went into executive session an hour after convening yesterday, and then adjourned until Monday, when the tariff bill will be taken up for general discussion. It was the plan to begin consideration of the measure yesterday, but it was returned to the House by special order so the oil joker could be corrected so as not to impose a duty on all the products of petroleum. The extension of time will also give the Democrats time to look more carefully into the bill and to be ready to discuss it intelligently when it is taken up.

There was a meeting of the full committee yesterday just before the Senate convened, but the bill was not discussed, except in a general way. The Democrats are still complaining that they have not been given sufficient time to study the various provisions, and it was partly on this account that it was agreed to adjourn until next week.

During the last session of the Senate yesterday, Senator Cummins introduced his amendments, providing for reciprocal arrangements between the United States and certain other countries. The various changes are planned after the like provisions of the Dingley and McKinley acts, although they are considered much broader. It gives the President power to suspend the duties imposed by the tariff law against any country that unreasonably discriminates against the United States, and to impose duties ranging from 20 to 35 per cent higher. He also is given the power to suspend the duties and impose rates as much as 20 per cent lower than is provided by law.

Discusses Administrative Features.

Late in the afternoon Senator Aldrich held a conference with James B. Reynolds about the administrative features of the bill, which will first be approved by the President and the Attorney General and reported to the Senate some time the last of next week. Mr. Reynolds simply wanted to get the general ideas of the provisions, as Mr. Aldrich would prepare in rough draft, so that he would be in a better position to begin his criticisms.

Sensor Aldrich said last night that he thought the administrative features would be ready to report within ten days, and that the Senate would not be required to wait after it had finished the other two sections of the measure.

Criticism that the Aldrich bill would not produce revenues sufficient to pay the expenses of the government still are pouring into the Finance Committee room from all parts of the country. Senator Aldrich and his colleagues on the committee seem not the least worried about these accusations, and say they are nothing but "political complaints."

Persons who have studied the career of the Rhode Island Senator are not likely to accept the statement that he will prepare a bill that would fall short of revenues; on the other hand, there are many who contend that this is his chief object in redrafting the Payne bill.

Sensor Aldrich was in constant communication with the officials of the Treasury during the time he was writing the new sections of the House bill, and he says he is thoroughly satisfied there will not be a shortage in the accounts of the government if his measure is allowed to pass as it is.

That the measure carefully avoids all internal revenue features is another point some make in favor of the Aldrich bill as a revenue producer. It seems to have been his plan, Congressmen say, to make foreign manufacturers and producers pay the expenses of the government, and that he has, therefore, left out all provisions for taxes upon the people of the United States, that is, so far as income, inheritance, stamp taxes, &c., are concerned.

Oil Producers Want Tax.

Independent operators from every oil field in the country will be given a hearing by the Senate Finance Committee next Thursday.

It is expected that there will be fully 30 present. They demand that an ad valorem tax of 40 or 50 per cent shall be placed upon imported crude oil.

They assert that free oil, as provided in the pending tariff bill, is a direct benefit to the Standard Oil Company, and a blow at all the independents. They say that the Standard produces only about one-tenth of the crude oil used in this country; its principal business being in refining. If it can get crude oil free from abroad it will be a decided advantage to that company, and at least partially destroy the market for the output of the independents.

HELD A SHORT SESSION.

House Met for Ten Minutes and Adjourned to Monday.

The House of Representatives was in session yesterday for only ten minutes. The message from President Taft, suggesting amendments to the tariff bill in behalf of the interests of the Philippine Islands, was read, and referred to the Committee on Ways and Means.

No further business was transacted. On motion of Representative Payne, of New York, the House at 12:10 o'clock adjourned until next Monday.

Root Introduces Bill.

Senator Root introduced a bill yesterday, authorizing the construction of a bridge across the Niagara River at Niagara Falls. The bill was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

Unidentified Body Taken from River.

The body of an unidentified negro was found in the Potomac River at the foot of Twentieth street northwest, about 5 o'clock yesterday morning. The body, which was removed to the morgue, was badly decomposed as to make identification almost impossible.

MEDICAL INSPECTION FOR SCHOOLS URGED

Mr. Macfarland Favors Dr.
Woodward's Plan.

WOULD INCREASE EXAMINERS

Advance in Pay for Physicians Who Will Look After Health of Pupils as Well as Sanitary Conditions of Institutions Also Is Planned—To Improve the Present System.

Commissioner Macfarland yesterday expressed hearty approval of recommendations contained in a report of Health Officer Woodward, urging a systematic medical inspection of public schools and school children in the District.

The report has been carefully considered by the president of the Board of Commissioners, and he said yesterday he would recommend to the Commissioners this provision for an increase in the number of inspectors be asked of Congress, in the estimates next year, that the system may be successfully worked.

These three reasons, all of which Dr. Woodward considers of vital importance, are advanced by him in favor of the proposed system:

"To prevent any pupil from attending school who is suffering from defect or disease which renders his presence materially detrimental to the welfare or the safety of other pupils, or any pupil whose attendance at school will materially jeopardize his own health when the condition on which such jeopardy arises is of a temporary character.

"To advise the principal of the school building with reference to all matters of hygiene or sanitation which are brought to the inspector's attention relating to school administration, and to invite the attention of principals and teachers to such conditions in the school room and in the building generally from a sanitary standpoint as require correction.

"To see that applicants for admission to the normal school, and pupils in that school seeking graduation, and of applicants for appointment as teachers or janitors are physically fit for the course of training or the work upon which they seek to enter."

Education Board Favors Plan.

This service is by law under the direction of the health officer, but such regulations as he makes concerning it must have the approval of the Commissioners and the board of education. The Commissioners have already expressed their approval of the scheme, and it is understood that, while no decisive vote on the matter has been taken by the school board, the majority of the members favor it. It is probable that a vote will be taken on the question at the next meeting.

No systematic effort has ever been made to thoroughly examine physically all the pupils of the public schools, declares Dr. Woodward. He says the number of available medical inspectors, in view of the fact that the salaries paid are not large enough to justify calling upon them to devote the entire day to their official duties, has not been sufficient to permit such work.

Dr. Woodward urges that several new inspectors be appointed, and that the salaries be increased.

Attending the physical needs of scholars in the public schools is in operation in Chicago, New York, Seattle, Wash., Newark, N. J., and several other cities. Reports from school authorities in these cities show a decrease in ill health among the scholars since the system has been in operation.

Urges Increase in Pay.

In concluding his report Dr. Woodward says:

"For the purpose of improving the service the health officer, in the estimates which he submitted for the expenses of the health department during the coming fiscal year, recommended that a chief medical inspector of schools be provided at $1,500 per annum, that the number of medical inspectors be increased from twelve to eighteen, that the salaries be increased from $500 to $600 per annum, and that six school nurses be provided at a salary of $500 each.

"With a corps such as that proposed, the health department, co-operating with the board of education, would be able to maintain such a general system of medical inspection as now exists in Chicago, or, better still, such a system as exists in New York City, where the work seems to have reached its highest development."

BROWNSVILLE BOARD READY.

Soon to Begin Taking Evidence in Negro Soldiers' Case.

Lieut. Gen. Young yesterday announced that the court appointed by the President in accordance with an act of Congress to investigate the Brownsville affair, probably will begin its hearings within the next two weeks. After diligent search the officers have selected the building at 1708 New York avenue as its headquarters.

The principal point established is that the court will make a thorough and complete investigation into the raid at Brownsville, and, if necessary, visit Fort Brown and hold sessions at the scene of the alleged raid.

Having established the main facts regarding the alleged shooting up of the Texas town, the court will consider the cases of all members of the Twenty-fifth Infantry, and then submit its report to the War Department.

In 1882 he again returned to the Congressional Record, but resigned the same year to take the management of the Evening Critic. He is survived by a son, E. E. Helm, who is an employee in the engineering department of the District government.

A national call has been sent out from New York, and it is expected the conference will be attended by a representative body of men who are engaged in the work of civic betterment.

HILL VISITS SPEAKER CANNON

Railroad Magnate Goes to the Capital
"Just to Say Hello."

Declares He Has No Interest in the Tariff Bill, Except as a Private Citizen.

"I just wanted to say hello to 'Uncle Joe.'"

That was the explanation given yesterday by James J. Hill, the "grand old man" of the railroad world, for his visit to the Capitol.

Mr. Hill held an impromptu reception to a half-hundred persons in the Speaker's room. He declared he had no interest in the tariff bill except as a private citizen. When asked for an expression as to the measure, he said:

"The people of the country feel that something has been promised, and I hope the Republican party will be judged correctly in its attempt to revise the law."

Mr. Hill really came to Washington, with other Western railroad officials to make plans for a visit to America of a party of thirty Japanese during the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition. The officials will call on the heads of city organizations in several of the cities of the East and see if something extraordinary cannot be put on the entertainment programme.

Mr. Hill asserted the next Congress would be controlled by Democrats unless the Republican party carries out its platform pledges to revise the tariff downward.

"The people have not forgotten the promises made in the last campaign, and it is incumbent upon the party in power to make good," he continued. "Party lines in the United States have never been so nearly obliterated as at present."

Mr. Hill was accompanied to the Speaker's office by Howard Elliott, president of the Northern Pacific, and John F. Carroll, counsel of the Burlington.

VETERANS PLAN FOR MUSTER.

Spanish War Organizations Hold Preliminary Meetings.

The muster of United Spanish War Veterans in the Chamber of Commerce, next Monday night, was the subject of discussion at meetings of Admiral Dewey Naval Camp, No. 7, and Henry W. Lawton Camp, No. 4, in Flynn's Hall, last night.

Admiral Dewey Camp elected a committee on entertainment to provide a programme for a future entertainment and to complete plans for taking part in the muster. The committee is composed of Thomas A. Green, Eugene McCarthy, and Comrades Nicholson and Dubois. The committee will meet in the room of Company G, District National Guard, at Center Market Armory, Saturday night.

Gen. Lawton Camp unanimously endorsed the action of the department commander in calling for a general muster in the Chamber of Commerce for Monday night. Plans were discussed and all present pledged themselves to attend and urge other comrades to be present. Dr. C. L. D. Anderson, senior vice commander of the camp, delivered an address on the good of the order.

Members of the Spanish War Veterans plan to make the muster Monday night a notable event. Every camp will be represented and addresses will be made by William F. Guide, president of the Chamber of Commerce; Capt. Robert Ferguson Hobson, and several other well-known men. Following the regular exercises, the veterans will renew their oath of allegiance to their country.
